Investment Objective

The primary investment objective of the fund is to achieve medium to long-term capital growth. The generation of income will be secondary to the primary objective of maximising capital growth.

The fund will pursue this objective by investing in equity securities of companies that are listed or traded on Regulated Markets either in Africa (excluding South Africa) or of companies that are listed or traded on Regulated Markets that carry out a substantial portion of their business (meaning not less than 51%) in Africa (excluding South Africa) (e.g. mining exploration companies listed on AIM, the Toronto Stock Exchange or the JSE).

February 2010

Commentary: 4th Quarter 2009

During 4Q 2009 the NAV of the Standard Africa Equity Fund fell by 4.5% in US$. Over 2009 as a whole, the Fund's NAV fell by 2% in US$.

The major influence on performance during the quarter was the decline in the Egyptian market, which accounts for 40% of Africa's stock market capitalisation ex South Africa and which tumbled by 7.5% in US$. Developments in Egypt itself were not really to blame – rather the knock-on effects of the crisis of confidence that hit Dubai in November, when Dubai World announced payment delays on certain of its loans related to its property operations. Fears spread throughout the Gulf region, a number of Gulf based markets plunging by up to 20%. Although most Egyptian companies were not directly implicated, there was widespread unease about the possible exposure of a number of North African property companies and financial institutions. Morocco was also caught up in the downdraft, falling by 4.4% in US$. In relative performance terms the Fund benefitted from being underweight both these markets but it was difficult to avoid the effects of these market falls in absolute terms. As we write at the beginning of 2010, it seems as if the markets' initial concerns were overdone. Dubai World has reached an amicable agreement with its creditors and Middle Eastern markets such as Egypt have begun the year posting a strong recovery.

African markets elsewhere tended to continue the performance patterns established in previous quarters. Nigeria fell by 7.1% in US$ on protracted worries about the health of its banking system, although it too has recovered well in the first few days of 2010 and we are of the view that selective banking stocks now offer good value. Smaller, less liquid markets also suffered from continued profit-taking. Ghana, for instance, fell by 10.7% in US$, making it Africa's worst performing market over the quarter but the fund had minimal exposure here. On a more positive note, Kenya was Africa's best performing market ex South Africa rising by 7.2% in US$ and the Fund benefitted from being considerably overweight in this market.

Sector asset allocation remained defensive, the Fund being overweight telecoms and consumer stocks and underweight cyclical industrials. The one major stock purchase during the quarter, Maroc Telecom, reflects this defensive approach.

It has to be admitted that African stock markets in 2009 performed less well than anticipated and certainly underperformed other emerging markets. We believe much of the explanation for this lay in the reluctance of investors to commit new funds to markets that had proved relatively illiquid and difficult to trade in 2008. This is borne out by the observation that liquid markets generally outperformed less liquid markets. Egypt is Africa ex South Africa's most liquid market and despite its tribulations in Q4, it still delivered a positive US$ return of 37.1% during the year and Mauritius, another notably liquid market, delivered a positive US$ return of 51.1%. On the other hand, relatively illiquid Ghana fell by 53.3% and the West Africa BRVM fell by 24.9% in US$.

However, African economies, as opposed to its stock markets, performed creditably. The latest IMF estimates suggest pan-African GDP will have grown by 1.5% in 2009, a positive outcome that echoes Africa's similarly robust performance at the time of the last global recession in 2003. While it would be wrong to conclude Africa is immune to global ills, the continent does appear to have sufficient internal economic momentum to enable it to weather all but the severest storms. For 2010, the IMF estimates African GDP growth could rebound to the 3% to 4% level, led by improving global trade and higher commodity prices. Given that stock market valuations in Africa are now once again towards the lower end of recent valuation ranges and the outlook for corporate profitability is improving, we continue to believe Africa will ultimately reward medium to long term investors.
